Hi Hilary,

I received a notice of your voting system pilot. Do any of these include voting from cellphones? I just wanted to check because we do live in the 21st century where we can do all of our secure transactions like banking, purchasing products, and authorizations. Our cellphone's are our personal assistant and the vast majority of Colorado residents own them. Most people would find their cellphones more secure than voting booths.

Second, why not post on the web everyone's votes? Once the votes are completed a JPG image of everyone in that precinct would be posted online with the tally of the votes. With this system everyone retains their anonymity, yet individually, one can verify their votes by entering the site with their username and password and able to see their votes.

We now live in a digital world where we can access data instantly. Voting should be no different. With such low public ratings of government, we more transparency. I would love to hear how you are progressing in this direction.

Respectfully,
Terry Sisson
