Hello, I would like to voice some concerns I have about remote notarizations. While I completely understand the need for convenience - I hate having to make a trip into the bank, too - I am worried about the effects this might have on allowing coercion. How do we know someone isn't being forced to submit a document - a change of will or deed, for instance? How can you protect against identity theft, so that someone in a caretaker position can't change vital documents to benefit themselves?

I would like to know more about how these issues would be addressed.

Thank you,
