Re-institute photo ID for everyone: it isn't hard to get, we must have them to buy alcohol and cigarettes for heaven sake. Since the time I first voted at 18, I had to sign a book to have my signatures compared and to make sure I was registered, and had to show ID. We were even issued precinct cards, and as a military wife I've voted all over the US. I never missed an election, even overseas. It's ridiculous to say that it's a hardship to have photo ID. Now with almost all mail-in (Oregon! and now here!) there must be more verification when people get their CDL.. the fact that our leaders have decided that ILLEGAL immigrants can have a DL? stupid stupid stupid.

The primary system needs to be simplified as well. Colorado is the first state I've ever lived in where I was not able to figure out how to vote in the primaries, and which effectually eliminates about 80% of us from getting into those caucuses. This year I almost got it! I've lived here almost 7... I never got the promised notification from the party website online of where to go, of any sort, not postcard nor email nor phone call. Sad and unacceptable these days.

Thank you, this may not have been what you were asking for, but I've said my 2 cents worth!
