For the most part I agree with the proposed changes. However I do not believe there is a need for current notaries to complete a course and pass a test every four years in order to renew their commission. I feel that the Secretary of State does an excellent job of keeping us informed of changes in procedures and rules and that such proposed courses would be redundant and only create more (in some cases) uncompensated time and expense to current notaries. I do believe that such courses would benefit potential notaries but still feel they would not be cost effective or beneficial for even potential notaries in order to renew their commissions.

Sincerely,
Rebecca S. Stevens
