I have been a Notary for multiple years. I have my Notary for my job and pay for the entire thing out of my own pocket. You make very little for Notary services. For a requirement to ask for a class and exam is not cost effective. Also, to take time out of already busy schedules to accommodate this request is unreasonable.

New Notary's are already required to take the class and exam (as it should be) but to require seasoned Notaries to do this isn't right. I would be forced to stop being a Notary just due to the shear cost and time requirement. This is not a good idea.

On the matter of the log book, that should be the sole responsibility of the Notary themselves. If you are not a Notary, haven't taken the class and exam, you have no reason to be looking at the log book that contains sensitive information. This would be exposing the Notary and others to possible undesirable situations. This is also a bad idea

I hope you take this into consideration when you make your decisions.

Thanks,
