I think that those who have served their full sentence should regain their voting rights. Those who are in the parole system have not fulfilled their obligation and should not regain their voting rights until their obligation is completed.

I was connected to a firm in which an individual embezzled over $175,000. His sentence was 35 years probation with no prison and garnishment of his wages. This person should not have had his voting rights immediately restored because he was not incarcerated.
