Ladies and Gentlemen: Colorado elections belong to the people. Unfortunately, Secretary of State Griswold does not agree. In her June 17th emergency rules proclamation, Griswold unilaterally attempted to block election transparency in our state.

Her moves REEK of fear of what would be found in an election audit. What is she concerned about with the findings of an audit? If she is certain that the election was run properly, then wouldn't a forensic audit be able to do nothing more than prove that fact? If she is uncertain, then SHE ought to be calling for a forensic audit. The audits that are being done in other states are being thoroughly monitored, MUCH more so than what happened on election night in many locations across the country, so it would be difficult to pull off something nefarious that illegitimately represents the actual results of the election.

This action is unethical, legally questionable and outrageous. I demand that Griswold void her emergency rules on election audits in order to guarantee Colorado citizens' rights to free, fair and transparent elections.

In closing, we ARE NOT in an emergency! This virus is NOT a death sentence, so there's no emergency there. And an audit would NOT create an emergency, unless those who benefitted from this past election know that they were not legitimately elected by the people, in which case this could be a political emergency for those who are illegitimately occupying an office. The only emergency that I see is an emergency of political corruption, which is occurring at the highest levels of our government and on down the line to local politics. If Griswold truly is from rural Colorado and espouses to what this state is all about, then she will allow for full transparency in an audit and let it play out.

Thank you.
